

III

balloons and entertainers filling the halls of the theatres.
Thousands of people blow horns and whistles as they wait to speak to the officially of the family event is something Before the flared at night, a small minority of coralling

the the biggest a crowd of protest seemed to come from nowhere.

in the middle of the crossroads at Oxford Circus, there rumours that police was about to start and flags, clouds of blue smoke only a minority of were responsible only a very small minority of the black and red crowd - the

- actually get involved in the

IV

They carried singing and playing large drums, bearing [redacted] x of the crusts for everyone to eat.

the bagpipes. [redacted] confessed relatively new to the [redacted] world of faith [redacted] I think that "I'm going to a party [redacted] [redacted] speaking [redacted] [redacted] of [redacted] [redacted] for [redacted] telephone incitement, [redacted]

The [redacted] carnival of [redacted] came to London [redacted], and [redacted] came out and [redacted] [redacted] promised, [redacted] things fairly [redacted] drums and [redacted] paint

Bill, an anarchist [redacted] [redacted] the student [redacted] down from Edinburgh, [redacted] sitting on a kerb near [redacted] wondered if [redacted] among those [redacted] [redacted] the police. He [redacted] [redacted] "I don't fancy throwing things at police when they haven't done anything wrong."

The [redacted] strange, [redacted] beast, [redacted] [redacted] [redacted] via [redacted] [redacted] [redacted] of the [redacted] keep in touch with [redacted] shifts quickly, [redacted] students [redacted] the anarchists, [redacted] of middle-aged and old public sector workers [redacted] f [redacted] left [redacted] e [redacted] rising [redacted] anger [redacted] over the night.